

PRE

To PREDICATE. v. n. To affirm or speak.

It were a presumption to think, that any thing in any created nature can bear any perfect resemblance of the incomprehensible perfection of the divine nature, very being itself not predicating univocally touching him and any created being.

PREDICATE. n. f. [prædicatum, Lat.] That which is affirmed of the subject; as man is rational.

The predicate is that which is affirmed or denied of the subject.

PREDICATION. n. f. [prædicatio, Lat. from predicate.] Affirmation concerning any thing.

Let us reason from them as well as we can; they are only about identical predications and influence.

To PREDICT. v. a. [prædictus, Lat. predire, Fr.] To foretell; to foreknow.

He is always inveighing against such unequal distributions; nor does he ever cease to predict public ruins, till his private are repaired.

PREDICTION. n. f. [prædictio, Lat. prediction, Fr. from predict.] Prophecy; declaration of something future.

These predictions are to the world in general, as to Caesar.

The predictions of cold and long winters, hot and dry summers, are good to be known.

How soon hath thy prediction, seer blest!

Measur'd this transient world the race of time,

Till time stand fix'd.

In Christ they all meet with an invincible evidence, as if they were not predictions, but after-relations; and the penmen of them not prophets but evangelists.

He, who prophesied the best,

Approves the judgment to the rest;

He'd rather choose, that I should die,

Than his prediction prove a lie.

PREDICTOR. n. f. [from predict.] Foreteller.

Whether he has not been the cause of this poor man's death, as well as the predictor, may be disputed.

PREDIGESTION. n. f. [præ and digestion.] Digestion too soon performed.

Predigestion, or hasty digestion, fills the body full of crudities and seeds of diseases.

To PREDISPOSE. v. a. [præ and dispose.] To adapt previously to any certain purpose.

Vegetable productions require heat of the sun, to predispose and excite the earth and the seeds.

Unless nature be predisposed to friendship by its own propensity, no arts of obligation shall be able to abate the secret hatreds of some persons towards others.

PREDISPOSITION. n. f. [præ and disposition.] Previous adaptation to any certain purpose.

It was conceived to proceed from a malignity in the constitution of the air, gathered by the predispositions of seasons.

Tunes and airs have in themselves some affinity with the affections; so as it is no marvel if they alter the spirits, considering that tunes have a predisposition to the motion of the spirits.

External accidents are often the occasional cause of the king's evil; but they suppose a predisposition of the body.

PREDOMINANCE. n. f. [præ and domina, Lat.] Prevalence; PREDOMINANCY. n. f. [superiority; ascendancy; superior influence.]

We make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon and the stars, as if we were knaves, thieves and treacherous by spherical predominance.

An inflammation consists only of a sanguineous affluxion, or else is denominable from other humours, according to the predominancy of melancholy, phlegm or choler.

In human bodies, there is an incessant warfare amongst the humours for predominancy.

The true cause of the Pharisees disbelief of Christ's doctrine, was the predominance of their covetousness and ambition over their will.

The several rays therefore in that white light do retain their colorific qualities, by which those of any sort, whenever they become more copious than the rest, do, by their excess and predominance, cause their proper colour to appear.

PREDOMINANT. adj. [predominant, Fr. præ and dominor.] Prevalent; supreme in influence; ascendent.

Miserable were the condition of that church, the weighty affairs whereof should be ordered by those deliberations, wherein such an humour as this were predominant.

Foul subornation is predominant,

And equity exil'd your highness' land.

It is a planet, that will strike

Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful.

Those helps were overweighed by divers things that made against him, and were predominant in the king's mind.

Whether the sun, predominant in heav'n,

Rise on the earth; or earth rise on the sun.

I could shew you several pieces, where the beauties of this kind are so predominant, that you could never be able to read or understand them.

To PREDOMINATE. v. n. [predominor, Fr. præ and dominor, Lat.] To prevail; to be ascendent; to be supreme in influence.

So much did love t' her executed lord

Predominate in this fair lady's heart.

The gods formed womens souls out of these principles which compose several kinds of animals; and their good or bad disposition arises, according as such and such principles predominate in their constitutions.

The rays, reflected least obliquely, may predominate over the rest, so much as to cause a heap of such particles to appear very intensely of their colour.

Where judgment is at a loss to determine the choice of a lady who has several lovers, fancy may the more allowably predominate.

PRE

To PREELECT. v. a. [præ and elect.] To chuse by previous decree.

PREEMINENCE. n. f. [preeminence, Fr. præ and eminence.] It is sometimes written, to avoid the junction of ee, preeminence.

1. Superiority of excellence.

I plead for the preeminence of epick poetry.

Let profit have the preeminence of honour in the end of poetry; pleasure, though but the second in degree, is the first in favour.

The preeminence of christianity to any other religious scheme which preceded it, appears from this, that the most eminent among the Pagan philosophers disclaimed many of those superstitious follies which are condemned by revealed religion.

2. Precedence; priority of place.

His lance brought him captives to the triumph of Artelia's beauty, such, as though Artelia be amongst the fairest, yet in that company were to have the preeminence.

He toucheth it as a special preeminence of Junias and Andronicus, that in christianity they were his ancients.

I do invest you jointly with my power, Preeminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty.

The English desired no preeminence, but offered equality both in liberty and privilege, and in capacity of offices and employments.

Am I distinguish'd from you but by toils,

Superior toils, and heavier weight of cares!

Painful preeminence.

3. Superiority of power or influence.

That which standeth on record, hath preeminence above that which passeth from hand to hand, and hath no pens but the tongues, no book but the ears of men.

Beyond the equator, the Southern point of the needle is sovereign, and the North submits his preeminence.

PRE-EMINENT. adj. [preeminent, Fr. præ and eminent.] Excellent above others.

Tell how came I here? by some great maker

In goodness and in pow'r preeminent.

We claim a proper interest above others, in the preeminent rights of the household of faith.

PRE-EMPTION. n. f. [præemptio, Lat.] The right of purchasing before another.

Certain persons, in the reigns of king Edward VI. and queen Mary, fought to make use of this preemption, but crossed in the prosecution, or defeated in their expectation, gave it over.

To PREENGAGE. v. a. [præ and engage.] To engage by precedent ties or contracts.

The world has the unhappy advantage of preengaging our passions, at a time when we have not reflection enough to look beyond the instrument to the hand whose direction it obeys.

To Cipeus by his friends his suit he mov'd,

But he was preengag'd by former ties.

Not only made an instrument;

But preengag'd without my own consent.

PREENGAGEMENT. n. f. [from preengage.] Precedent obligation.

My preengagements to other themes were not unknown to those for whom I was to write.

The opinions, suited to their respective tempers, will make way to their assent, in spite of accidental preengagements.

Men are apt to think, that those obediences they pay to God shall, like a preengagement, disannull all after-contracts made by guilt.

As far as opportunity and former preengagements will give leave.

To PREEN. v. a. [preinen, Dutch, to dress or prank up.] To trim the feathers of birds, to enable them to glide more easily through the air: for this use nature has furnished them with two peculiar glands, which secrete an unctuous matter into a perforated oil bag, out of which the bird, on occasion, draws it with its bill.

To PREESTABLISH. v. a. [præ and establish.] To settle beforehand.

PREESTABLISHMENT. n. f. [from preestablish.] Settlement beforehand.

To PREEXIST. v. a. [præ and exist, Lat.] To exist beforehand.

If thy preexisting soul

Was form'd at first with myriads more,

It did through all the mighty poets roll.

PREEXISTENCE. n. f. [preexistence, Fr. from preexist.] Existence beforehand; existence of the soul before its union with the body.

Wisdom declares her antiquity and preexistence to all the works of this earth.

As Simonides has exposed the vicious part of women, from the doctrine of preexistence; some of the ancient philosophers have satyrized the vicious part of the human species, from a notion of the soul's postexistence.

PREEXISTENT. adj. [preexistent, Fr. præ and existent.] Existing beforehand; preceding in existence.

Artificial things could not be from eternity, because they suppose man, by whose art they were made, preexistent to them; the workman must be before the work.

Blind to former, as to future fate,

What mortal knows his preexistent state?

If this preexistent eternity is not compatible with a successive duration, then some being, though infinitely above our finite comprehensions, must have had an identical, invariable continuance from all eternity, which being is no other than God.

PREFACE. n. f. [præface, Fr. præfatio, Lat.] Something spoken introductory to the main design; introduction; something preomial.

This superficial tale

Is but a preface to her worthy praise.

Sir Thomas More betrayed his depth of judgment in state affairs in his Utopia, than which, in the opinion of Budæus in a preface before it, our age hath not seen a thing more deep.

Heav'n's high behest no preface needs;

Sufficient that thy pray'rs are heard, and death

Defeated of his seizure.

To PREFACE. v. n. [præfari, Lat.] To say something introductory.

Before I enter upon the particular parts of her character, it is necessary to preface, that she is the only child of a decrepit father.

To PREFACE. v. a.

1. To introduce by something preomial.

Thou art rash,

And must be prefac'd to government.

2. To face; to cover. A ludicrous sense.

I love to wear cloaths that are flush,

Not prefacing old rags with plush.

PREFACER. n. f. [from preface.] The writer of a preface.

If there be not a tolerable line in all these six, the prefacer gave me no occasion to write better.

PREFATORY. adj. [from preface.] Introductory.

If this proposition, whosoever will be saved, be restrained only to those to whom it was intended, the christians, then the anathema reaches not the heathens, who had never heard of Christ: after all, I am far from blaming even that prefatory addition to the creed.

PREFECT. n. f. [præfectus, Lat.] Governor; commander.

He is much

The better soldier, having been a tribune,

Prefect, lieutenant, prætor in the war.

It was the custom in the Roman empire, for the prefects and vice-roys of distant provinces to transmit a relation of every thing remarkable in their administration.

PREFECTURE. n. f. [præfectura, Fr. præfectura, Lat.] Command; office of government.

To PREFER. v. a. [preferer, Fr. præfero, Lat.]

1. To regard more than another.

With brotherly love, in honour prefer one another.

2. With above before the thing postponed.

If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy.

3. With before.

He that cometh after me, is preferred before me; for he was before me.

It may worthily seem unto you a most shameful thing, to have preferred an infamous peace before a most just war.

O spirit, that dost prefer

Before all temples th' upright heart.
